

Canadian Writing Centre Review / Revue canadienne des centres de rédaction
CWCA/ACCR AGM Report

May 26, 2022

Prepared by Brian Hotson, CWCR/RCCR Editors

To Join the 2021-2022 Editorial team as an Associate Editor or Contributor or to write for the blog, contact Brian Hotson, CWCR/RCCR editor at cwcr.rccr@gmail.com.

Here are our guidelines for authors. You can also join the CWCR/RCCR writing community on Slack here.

CWCR/RCCR has an open submission, so please connect with us with your ideas or concepts for pieces - we can help you with development and editing.

CWCR/RCCR's vision is to support, mentor, and develop writers in the Canadian writing centre scene. Recognizing a need to develop a scholarly tradition in writing centre studies and writing scholarship in Canada, CWCR/RCCR may be seen as an incubation site for writers. It's a place for trying out ideas, concepts, and sharing among a growing community of writing centre practitioners in Canada.

2020-2021 Editorial team

Co-Editors

Stephanie Bell and Brian Hotson

Associate Editors

Liv Marken
Holly Salmon

Contributors

Julia Lane

2021-2022 Editorial team

Editor-in-Chief

Brian Hotson

Associate Editors

Stephanie Bell
Julia Lane
Liv Marken
Holly Salmon

Achievements

In the past year, CWCR/RCCR has published 18 posts in two volumes.

Directions & priorities for the coming year

An issue with the CWCR/RCCR is a lack of interest on the part of the writing centre community in Canada to participate in contributing content or participating with its running. As a result, CWCR/RCCR, will need to expand its editorial staff for the coming year.